A table ruled with filled hairlines

The structure tree follows the reading order	Clause 7.2, logical structure and order
Tables are tagged with their rows and cells	Clause 7.5, table rows, headers and cells
Every figure carries an alternative text	Clause 7.3, figures and their descriptions
Running heads and folios are artifacts	Clause 7.8, page headers and page footers
The document states its natural language	Clause 7.2, the Lang entry of the catalog

Two columns of prose under a barred title

Accessible documents carry a structure tree that names what each part of a page is: a heading, a paragraph, a list, a table or a figure. Assistive technology reads that tree rather than the order in which a producer happened to draw the text, so a page set in

Some producers set such a page line by line, the first line of the left column and then the first line of the right one, on the same baseline. A bar under the title and a panel behind the text are no rules between rows, so each column still reads as one paragraph.